Answer questions 12-14, according to the passage below.

Why there are so many well-preserved fossils in the Gobi Desert is an issue that has speculations on. The desert is so infertile that it is almost impossible for animals and plants to survive there. Many researches have been carried out to find out how the living things survived in the area. The result of these researches shows that the area was struck by very strong winds before the dinosaurs became extinct. These winds carried piles of sand to the Gobi Desert and they both overwhelmed and buried the dinosaurs. This may have kept the fossils well-preserved up to date.
